Middletown fire station available to those in need of heat

Residents of Middletown in need of heat during the extreme cold spell the area is expecting can seek shelter at the Middletown Volunteer Fire Department, located at the corner of Adelia and East Emaus streets in the Borough.

Mayor James H. Curry III has directed the Borough's Emergency Management Agency to reopen the "warming station" made available to Borough residents during the last polar vortex. The shelter is available to Borough residents should they need emergency shelter due to a loss of heat, broken pipes, or other weather related problems.

Residents needing shelter are asked to contact Emergency Management Coordinator Tom Foreman at 717-810-7569 to make arrangements.
